Personal Profile

My objective is to work within a life-changing, multi-cultural and positive organization and to access a motivating and dynamic professional experience in the gaming industry.

I was born in Spain, have an English father and American mother, I'm very easy-going, sociable and am keen to learn and excel in everything I do.

At my last full-time work experience, I worked for a Gambling site called BetVictor, building prototypes and building user interfaces, I currently work for a gaming company called Gameduell.

I would love to work for a growing company facing many challenges and striving to accomplish objectives on different levels.

Web Designer/Developer – Betvictor

I started working for Victor Chandler as a web designer, I worked nearly 2 years providing UX designs for the web team and building banners with live odds that are currently still rotating on pages like oddschecker.com and livescore.com. As soon as there was an opening in the front-end team I moved, and for two years I've been building and maintaining web components in HTML (including rails and template languages), CSS (sass/scss and css3 animations) and JS (vanilla js, jquery and angularjs). I also work with task managers like grunt and gulp.

This start-up company, based in Granada, is a social network where people can exchange gifts. My role was to create and edit files to compose the website, creating an application so that other countries could easily access the website and the translation into their own language, saving the data automatically in place and making website translation very user-friendly.

Tasks:

- Translating all the documents into English and uploading them to the server.
- Setting up email addresses and templates for directors and other employees, including the edition of the company logo for this purpose.
- Making publicity banners for other websites.

Achievements:

- Making the website 100% bug free (no testers so we had to do the testing).

Establishing a good relationship with designers from other countries.

After my contract ended, the company continued to send me documents to translate to this day.
